Oh dear! There was a "Site Remediation Group" set up yesterday with a phone meeting at 1830 which I should have been on but only got notice at about 2100! Other members seem to be RBKC ("becc@rbkc.gov.uk"), HSE, LFB and Met Police plus someone with email "@phe.gov.uk" that I don't recognise. One of the actions was the meeting I referred to below.

Are either of you linked in with the 9am meeting on site by the Military Assistance Team and London Resilience Team to review structure options?

Thanks for your earlier feedback.

Latest message I have is that at 1130 tomorrow morning there is another Strategic Working Group Conference. Would it be possible for me to have had by an hour before that an action plan for being in a position to agree reopening the railway? We are currently working on the basis that actual reopening is unlikely to be tomorrow but could be later this week if all goes well - and message is very much it must be safe but should also be as soon as possible as continued closure will have a knock on effect across the LU network.

Nigel - if you are able to talk to be about some of the engineering issues and how we can work to resolve it would be appreciated.

Nigel - having spoken to Jim again he is not getting internet access. Can you help with answers please. (I am coordinating for LU the civil engineering actions to get the railway safely reopened.)

Jim - as just discussed - do we know when it might be possible to do a touching inspection of the damaged column rather than rely on photos? Might this make it possible to have greater certainty of the level of risk? LU currently go with the position that suspension must continue while the risk is unquantifiable but obviously we need certainty of how long this will be the case.

Also do we know why K&C cannot start design until tomorrow? This extra delay will be raised at high level strategic meeting later.

Thanks for your help.
